My Reading Grimoire

A Blind Date with a Book companion · Yule & Christmas edition

> Print these pages, fold them, and tuck them in with your book. Add your shop name and handle at the bottom of each page.

Page 1: This Book Belongs To

Name: _____

Date I opened it: _____

Where I read it: _____

Moon phase tonight: _____

My reading intention: _____

Light your incense. Pull your card. Open to the first page.

Page 2: The Blind Date Profile

First impression from the tag: _____

What I hoped it would be: _____

Did the first page grab me? Yes · Sort of · Not yet

First line that stayed with me: _____

Page 3: My Card

Card on the back of my book: _____

What it means (from the note inside): _____

How I felt about it before reading: _____

How it fit the story after reading: _____

Page 4: Quotes & Spells to Keep

Lines I want to remember. Copy them out and keep them like spells.

1.
2.
3.
4.

Page 5: Fun Facts for Readers & Witches

- Grimoire: the word comes from the Old French word for grammar, and today it means a book of spells, notes, and magic. This one is yours.
- Bibliomancy: an old practice of opening a book to a random page and reading the first passage you see as a message. Try it before you start your book.
- Tsundoku: a Japanese word for buying books and letting them pile up unread. If you have a stack, you're in good company.
- Palo santo: the name means "holy wood" in Spanish.
- Yule: a winter celebration marked around the solstice, usually near December 21, the longest night of the year in the Northern Hemisphere.

Page 6: A Yule Reading Ritual

1. Dim the lights and light your candle.
2. Burn your incense or palo santo, with a window cracked and never left unattended.
3. Hold your crystal and write one intention for the new year.
4. Make your tea and read the first chapter before you do anything else.
5. Close the night by writing one line about how you feel.

Page 7: Rate Your Blind Date

Colour in the moons.

Story: ● ◑ ◐ ◐ ○

Writing: ● ◑ ◐ ◐ ○

Mood it left me in: _____

Would I go on a second date with this book? Yes · Maybe · It's a keeper · Pass it on

Page 8: After the Last Page

What I'll remember: _____

Who I want to pass this book to: _____

A wish for the year ahead: _____

Thank you for going on a blind date with me.

[Shop name] · [Instagram handle] · Handmade in Canada 🍁